

Application Guidelines for Graduate Program in Spintronics,
Tohoku University
(Fall, 2024)

Graduate School of Science and Graduate School of Engineering,
Tohoku University

1. Number of Recruitments

Graduate Program in Spintronics, (hereafter, GP-Spin) will recruit several students for October 2024.

2. Eligibility

Those who are or will be enrolled basically as a second-year master's degree student at either of Graduate School of Science, or Graduate School of Engineering, Tohoku University, as of April 2024. The applicants should conduct research related to Spintronics, and plan to continue on to the Doctoral program soon after completing their master's degree program. The applicant should also have a recommendation from their academic supervisor with an expectation to be appropriate to join the program.

- GP-Spin is a continuous graduate program, basically starting from the second year in master's program, followed by three years of Doctoral program. Only the students who plan to continue on to the Doctoral program are eligible to apply for this program.
- If the applicant has a clear vision of continuing on to their Doctoral program, and have a strong recommendation from their supervisor, we also accept applications from students in the first year of their master's degree and Doctoral program.

7. Financial Support

To gather excellent students from inside and outside of Japan, and to have them plan and practice independent and original research, we, a premium degree conferring program, hire the students at GP-Spin as a research assistant (RA). We pay them salaries for their work to be part of their financial support, and this helps to foster them to be a leader on a global scale.

The amount of work and salary will be determined by the rules of Tohoku University.

If you are currently receiving a scholarship or financial support, consult us in advance in order not to violate any regulations among them.

Part-time jobs are not allowed for the students at GP-Spin, based on the aim of the program. However, it may be allowed in some cases, such as when it can be considered as part of their study or research, and up to some extent.

8. Remarks

GP-Spin students are required to apply for the Research Fellowship for Young Scientists at JSPS. Applicants may apply for other graduate programs at the same time, but whether they can be recruited at both (or all of) the programs may be considered individually.
